TARGET GROUP

PROJECT OBJECTIVES

Identify and share good practices that prevent or address loneliness at individual, family, and community levels, focusing on low-threshold approaches;

Learn about successful cases of intervention strategies that, deployed early in life, can lead to a reduction in the incidence of loneliness later in life, focusing on longer-term approaches;

Understand the key factors that enable these good practices to be transformed and achieve higher impact policies and how to integrate them into other policies (such as health, education, and housing).

POLICY INSTRUMENTS

PROJECT OUTCOME

After three years of activities—including six learning events, regional stakeholder seminars, study visits, and peer review workshops—KORALE will publish a collection of 24 good practices along with a Policy Guide to help tackle social isolation and loneliness.
